Citizens' traffic worries presented to Lemon Grove City Council

By Lisa Parsons

A small group of citizens concerned about high-speed traffic on Englewood Drive addressed the City Council at Monday night's meeting.

Vincent Marra, a resident of Englewood Drive, showed the Council a petition signed by his neighbors that included notes on traffic patterns on Englewood. Several people observed cars traveling at speeds around 60 miles per hour on Englewood and cited problems with outside walls being knocked down. Marra said commuters use Englewood Drive as a way to avoid the lights on Skyline Drive and are not careful about the many children in the area. "What we would like to do is have some sort of traffic control," said Marra, suggesting that the Council add stop signs or dips on Englewood Drive.

Another Englewood Drive resident, Mike Williams, said, "Englewood Drive is a playground for the kids--so that's [their safety] what we're after."

Rush Rowley, an active member of the senior community in Lemon Grove, also presented the Council with a petition asking for their help in erecting a flag pole at the Lemon Grove Senior Center, to show the senior's patriotism and pride in America.

The petition, which was signed by 147 seniors, stated, "We the undersigned Senior Citizens consider ourselves fortunate to live in the United States of America. We are a proud people and Patriotic to our Country. We deem it an honor to stand in reverence and pledge Our Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America. Many of us have served our country or have spouses, friends, or relatives who have served and in many cases, we loved ones who willingly gave their lives to defend our Country whose Flag, the Stars and Stripes, is a symbol of our Nationality, proclaiming our high Standards of Freedom and a mark of distinction.

"We Beseech you, the elected Members of the City Council of Lemon Grove, to erect a Flag pole on the outside grounds of the Lemon Grove Senior Center to let the world know that we honor our Flag and 'We are proud to be an American.'"

Rowley offered to raise the cost of the flag pole, which he estimates to be over $1,000 if the City will take control of erecting the pole.

New shopping center under construction in Lemon Grove

Construction is underway on the new $5 million Lemon Grove/Gateway Shopping Center on a 1.9 acre site at 3301 College Avenue adjacent to the College Avenue/Broadway off-ramp of Highway 94 in Lemon Grove.

The 27,000 square foot project is going up on property formerly occupied by Denny's, HomeFed Bank and Yum Yum Donuts. Slated for completion in May, the Center is currently 34 percent pre-leased to Po'Folks Family Restaurants, Eagle Markets and Yum Yum Donuts.

The project is being built by Continental Pacific Development Company with Jeff Kane and Mike Lovan as principals, who recently named Dick Bridy and Chris Rink of John Burnham and Company Commercial Real Estate as exclusive leasing agents. Gateway Center offers remaining tenant spaces ranging in size from 885 to 3,227 square feet.

The Center was designed by Ronald N. Young A.I.A. Peterbuilt Construction is the general contractor.

Living Christmas Tree performance to benefit Child Abuse Prevention Foundation

Every year at Christmas time, Skyline Wesleyan Church performs a musical extravaganza called the Living Christmas Tree. Approximately 350 church members put in hundreds of hours in rehearsal time over a 3 1/2 month period to produce this incredible show, which incorporates amazing lighting effects to highlight the performers singing and dancing talent.

Last year, for the first time, Skyline decided to host a benefit performance on behalf of the Child Abuse Prevention Foundation (CAPF). The church set a goal to raise $100,000 for CAPF, but, due to a very enthusiastic response, they were able to donate over $200,000.

This year's performance is scheduled for December 3rd and the goal is once again set at $100,000. The black tie event costs $150 per ticket and features hors d'oeuvres at 6 p.m., the performance at 7 p.m. and a dessert buffet at 9 p.m.

As a church, Skyline is not religiously or politically associated with CAPF. The Foundation was chosen because of its worthwhile goals and the church's desire to make a significant Christmas gift to San Diego.

CAPF was founded by four private citizens in 1981 and has evolved into a major source of grant and volunteer support for child abuse agencies in San Diego County. Five auxiliaries, totaling 800 volunteers, assist CAPF in their fund-raising goals, provide a voice for children in the courts and political structure, and create opportunities for children and their families.

The CAPF Board of Directors provides ongoing strategic direction and oversees the efforts of advisory committees in assessing community needs and evaluating funding requests. The CAPF staff works in cooperation with Foundation leaders to distribute information to the community, generate funds and increase awareness of child abuse issues.

Agencies assisting children and their families received over $500,000 in 1988.

CAPF now has an ambitious goal to build a Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Center for San Diego children. The money raised by Skyline last year was contributed to the $2 million already raised of the $5 million needed to begin construction on the Center.

There is currently only one County-owned facility in San Diego designed to provide emergency housing for children. It is capable of providing temporary care for only 22 children at a

Mt. Miguel El Trovador News Briefs

The Mount Miguel Marching Matadors and Specialty Corps will be participating in the Rose Bowl Parade in Pasadena on New Year's Day. They performed well at the Mount Carmel Tournament on October 27, with the Band taking 1st in the parade and 2nd overall, with the tall flags section placing 4th in the parade and 3rd overall.

The Mount Miguel speech team took second place last Saturday at the all-county contest held at Point Loma College and captured 15 trophies. Varsity winners were: First place, humorous, Scott Kennerly; first place oratorical, Ed Pettis; second place, dramatic, Torrey Stepp; second place thematic, Yvonne Aguirre; fourth place dramatic, Yvonne Aguirre; fourth place thematic, Sallee Buchanan; fifth place dramatic; seventh place oratorical, Dennis Henry. Junior Varsity winners were: First place, thematic, Angela Farr; third place, oratorical, Kaiti Snow; fifth place, thematic, Priscella Vasquez; fifth place, thematic, Priscella Vasquez; sixth place, thematic, Kimberly Bayon; eighth place, oratorical, Donovan Morris; eighth place dramatic, Nelson Taylor, and eighth place thematic, Sabrina Harris.

Sixteen honors/college prep students at Mount Miguel are available for tutoring services. These students will privately meet with students for a fee in the range of $5 per hour to offer help on most subjects. Contacts for this service may be made through Mr David Schultz in the career center.

The varsity basketball team won by 15 points over Granite Hills in a preview game held October 30. Sophomore, Marcos Gallardo earned 15 points as the high scorer on the team. Varsity basketball starts its regular season December 14 at Mount Miguel at 7:30 p.m. against the Valhalla Norsemen.

Mount Miguel's water polo team closed the season losing to Vista at Palomar on November 3 with a score of 17-8, but on November 1 they defeated Helix 11-8.

The new PTA president at Mount Miguel is Candy De Rose, who has a son, Dean, in the freshman class.

Junior Toya Sims has been selected editor-in-chief of Reflections '91, the creative writing class's magazine. Layout editors are Shelly Romero and Larami Ohlund; poetry editors, Lisa Johnson and Teri Lyn Maons; fiction editors, Ronald Smith and Donovan Morris; non-fiction editors, Heather Fisher and Tracey Divver; Scripts and fillers editors, Jason Jablow and Heather Holwig; photo editors, Adam Love and Robert Harget. The business manager is Jennifer Jones; typists are Tabitha Goodwin and Desiree Valdez, and proofreaders are Anna Bjornson and Tracey Nielson who both served last year as co-editors-in-chief.

Reem Radwin and Norman Hardman were crowned Queen and King at Mount Miguel's homecoming last Friday. The first place homecoming float was built by the Senior class, entitled, "Woodstock." Second place was taken by the sophomores, third by the freshman and last, the juniors.

The Matadors lost by a score of 9-7 in a fight to the finish against West Hills at the Homecoming game last Friday. Tomorrow they play the season final against Helix at Mount Miguel; kickoff time is 7:30 for the coveted Claymore.

Seven journalism students and their advisor, Mrs. Patricia Curtis, attended a seminar on child abuse and related concerns at Children's Hospital last Wednesday, October 31. Students who participated were Bill West, Amber Johnson, Jason Ficken, Linda King, Charlotte Sanabria, Charles Keeton and Bryan Smith.

Lemon Grove company teams up with Salvation Army for Christmas

This holiday season, customers and employees of the Lemon Grove Associates Financial Services Company office will work together to provide those in need with a brighter Christmas through the Salvation Army.

Throughout November and December, the office, located at 7148 Broadway, will serve as a collection point for new toys and non-perishable food items which will be distributed by the Salvation Army. In addition, Associates will make a corporate donation which will be given to the Salvation Army in each of the 700 communities in which the company operates.

"The people of Lemon Grove have been very good to us this year," said Branch Manager Lloyd Johnsey. "But we're more than just a business here. We are also friends and neighbors who want to do something special for people in the community. The food and new toys will be utilized by the Salvation Army to make sure that families in need are helped in some way."

All items collected at the Lemon Grove Associates office will be presented to the Salvation Army on December 14.

In addition to providing donations through the Salvation Army, the Lemon Grove branch will host a reception complete with refreshments and complimentary gifts (while they last) for its customers on November 19 to 21, as part of its "Customer Appreciation Days."

Associates Financial Services Company, Inc., provides installment and revolving loan products and credit-related insurance, and is a subsidiary of Associates Corporation of North America.

School teacher receives national science award

Naomi Ramos, a teacher at San Altos School, was recently awarded the prestigious certification in elementary school science from the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA) as a result of her participation in a three-year program sponsored by UCSD.

The Lemon Grove teacher was presented her certificate by NSTA Executive Director William Aldridge, along with 14 other San Diego area teachers. The teachers were among 100 elementary teachers participating in the third year of a three-year UCSD institute, funded in part by a $940,000 grant from the National Science Foundation. The institute is designed to develop a cadre of 1000 elementary school teachers who will serve as leadership/resource teachers in their respective schools and districts.

Each year of the three-year program includes an intensive five-week summer study at UCSD followed by eight day-long meetings during the academic year. This year's focus was physical science.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

I can remember the exact moment it happened. It was late last week in the evening. During the TV commercial break, I watched five consecutive political announcements and my mind snapped.

"No more," I screamed at either Marian Bergeson or Clint Eastwood. Or possibly it was Jack Drown ... my media-riddled mind was no longer able to delineate them sharply.

I do clearly remember Angela Landsbury telling me something about term limitation...or was it about redwoods? No, that was either Michael Landon or Dianne Feinstein (whoever she is). I know she's running for something! For a day or two, I either changed the channel or ran into the bedroom whenever something political seemed to be coming on the tube. But I had to deep-six that approach when I missed half of LA Law, thinking it was an ad for either Pete Wilson or Arlo Smith.

Not wishing to give up my favorite programs, I decided to tough it out. Maybe if I closed my eyes and only listened, I might get through until election

At first, that wasn't too bad. I felt I clearly understood that Dianne left a deficit of $172 million somewhere, and that Pete voted better under sedation. But then I became confused over whether it was Marian Bergeson or Leo McCarthy who loved Rose Bird. (What was she running for?) Then, I tried the reverse. ... I opened my eyes and closed my ears, but became completely overwrought when Pete Wilson turned Mission Bay red. I saw lots of pictures of redwoods, but had absolutely no idea what they were doing there. When I saw Gray Davis playing volleyball at Zuma Beach, I knew it was curtains.

My sanity at stake, I rushed to turn off the set just in time to hear Dianne ask that we all put negative campaigning behind us! I wonder what she meant by that.

After all of that, I never got to vote Tuesday. My doctor wouldn't let me out of bed! He said I was too confused to be trusted with my country's future. And I haven't dared turn the TV back on yet.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

After marriage and a family, we built a beautiful new home out in the mountains east of San Diego. When we planted, watered, and cared for our new lawn, along with several small trees, the rabbits invaded our yard nightly to eat that luscious greenery. This disaster prompted me to break my solemn vow of no more hunting.

I stepped out into the shadows one night and shot one of those cute little wild hares. The cry of a wounded rabbit is very similar to a baby's cry. My youngest daughter, the sweet thing that she was, heard the rabbit and went to her room sobbing, sorry for the animal and hating me. That was it! Another promise never to break, "no more guns."

We moved up to the mountains of beautiful Colorado for a spell, where the really big game hung out. My wife's brothers settled there because of the great hunting. We were served wild game (which I hate) at each meal, and all the talk was about their many fabulous hunts. I still had no urge to shoot those beautiful, magnificent creatures, especially when I couldn't stand the taste of the meat. I went fishing instead of accompanying them on the hunt. I guess they thought of me as one big "odd ball."

Willie, my wife, and I loved Colorado, so we bought a place with a nice big garden spot. Willie has "green thumbs" so her vegetable garden flourished. The surrounding fields were teeming with prairie dogs, but as long as I could admire those cuties from afar, all was well. As the garden ripened, the little rodents started stealing our produce.

Now, I was mad and my "No Hunting" ban was temporarily called off. Over to the K-mart I went to purchase a 22-gauge rifle to shoot prairie dogs in the eye. I knocked them down as they came near to our luscious garden until I discouraged them and the situation was ended, or at least, subsided.

Here I go again! My next door neighbor who was a blood-thirsty animal killer invited me on an extended hunt up in Manitoba, Canada. With my borrowed 30-30 Winchester, we took off for the far North Country. The thoughts of roaming the wilds of Canada intrigued me more than the hunting.

We stayed with some very accommodating Islandic people. The first day we split up and headed out to stalk the white tailed deer. I came upon a group of bucks and does at very close range. I took aim, but I could not pull the trigger, I had "buck fever."

There was no way I was going to kill or maim any one of those beautiful creatures.

To this day, it's hard for me to kill any animal, even a mouse, 'cause they are just "too cute to shoot."

Parents, it's later than you think

by Joseph Walker

As far as I can tell, there's only one thing standing between me and becoming the world's greatest father. Me.

It's not that I don't love my kids. And it isn't even that I don't understand how significant my role as a parent is to their growth and development. It's just that every time I think I'm on the verge of becoming King Daddy, something comes along to remind me how far I have to go before I'm the kind of father my children deserve.

Take last weekend, for instance. For the first time in I don't know how long, I didn't have anything scheduled that was going to take me away from my family either Saturday or Sunday. I looked forward to it as a time to clear away the projects that have been piling up around the house and spend some serious quantity time with my children.

But the projects came first, and I attacked them with obsessive abandon. About mid-morning, Amy asked me to listen to her violin recital piece. I told her that I'd love to, but I was up to my elbows in dryer parts, so it would have to be later.

But "later" never came. Because there were these football games, see-- three different games on three different channels. Thanks to my remote control zapper, I was able to keep track of all of them--at once. I hadn't had time to just sit and watch football for a long time, and it felt great. At least, that's what I told Joe when he asked me to go outside with him and throw a few passes.

"Besides," I said, "The games are on now. We'll have plenty of time to play catch--later."

But "later" never came. My sister and her family did. So we shooed the children off to the other room while we adults talked and laughed late into the night. I did have one nice interchange with Amy, though. When sleepy-eyed baby Elizabeth came to me, her arms outstretched and her favorite blanket in her hand, I asked Amy to get her ready for bed and then put her down. And I thanked her nicely for doing it, too.

Late Sunday night, Andrea reminded me that I had promised to fix the flat tires on her bicycle and help her learn to ride it.

"It's too late for that now," I snapped, tired from a long, busy weekend. "Why didn't you talk to me about this yesterday?"

"I did," she said softly, huge tears beginning to form in her clear blue eyes. "You said you'd do it later. And I thought this was later."

It was. Later than I thought.

That night, during the usual round of goodnight kisses, hugs and "I love you's," I remembered my noble fatherly intentions for the weekend. Suddenly, those projects didn't seem so important and those football games didn't seem so compelling. Even the visit with my sister and her family, usually a highlight around our house, seemed intrusive and ill-timed.

But my sister wasn't to blame here. I was. King Daddy. An opportunity had presented itself, and I had fumbled it in a fog of selfishness and misplaced priorities.

A wise man once said that "no other success can compensate for failure in the home." Now, I wouldn't go so far as to say that

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges Quiet dignity, Great resolve

Few men live a life as rewarding and full of measure and meaning as Mil Chipp. He was a career newspaperman, a gifted editorial executive, a highly decorated combat pilot and a devoted family man. We would be quick to add, "and a life-long baseball fan."

He passed away last Sunday, losing a long and tenacious battle to cancer. In keeping with his own strong sense of values, he fought courageously, with great resolve and quiet dignity.

He joined the Copley newspaper organization shortly after his discharge in WWII. He wrote his way from reporter to editor and earned a no-nonsense professional reputation that led to his becoming an editorial advisor to the publisher.

Being an executive was great professionally and financially, but Mil reverted to his first sportin' love after working hours and took on the task of covering the Padres as a game-day reporter for United Press International (UPI).

Mil has been a fixture in the Padres press box since the days of Lane Field and Westgate Park. He had seen nearly every Padre home game since he moved to San Diego and settled in La Mesa in 1952.

Fortunately, he proved to be as much a historian as a reporter.

In the hectic days following the near sale of the Padres to Washington, most of the team's records were lost. But Mil, the true fan, had copies of nearly everything and the history of the National League Padres was restored.

When he retired from newspapering, he joined the Padres as a statistician and historian. He maintained his game-day coverage for UPI in kind of a double-headed labor of love.

Mil was a gentle, quiet person and rather shy, but among close friends he was a marvelous storyteller. Part of his military duties included interviewing combat crews about their missions.

He told stories from the crew's point of view of the 1,000 plane raids over Berlin and the two-way maximum effort raid over the Ploiesti oil fields in Romania, where the air group flew on to North Africa, rested, reloaded and rearmed and blasted Ploiesti again on their way back to England. He told of pilots facing enemy fighters flying ten across, wing tip to wing tip, coming head-on, firing together in a seeming endless assault for the entire 12 to 14 hour flights on deep penetrations into Nazi Germany, well past any friendly fighter range.

Mil told vivid stories of the 291 plane raid on the ball-bearing works at Schweinfurt on October 14, 1943, and of how the attacking force destroyed the target, but lost 60 planes with another 140 damaged. Not a plane came through unscratched.

He had a big grin for one story. It was his "no hitter." Mil knew the details of the bombing attack on Rjukan, Norway, one of the highest priority raids of the war. The Rjukan plant made "heavy water," used for atomic research. The plant, made of stone, concrete and steel, was built 150 feet up the side of a 1,000 foot cliff. Rjukan was just across the Mos River at the base of the fjord, only 300 yards across.

"They hit the plant, but didn't drop a single bomb in the town," grinned Mil in telling the story. A few weeks later the King of Norway, Haakon VII, surprised the squadron with a visit, where he personally decorated each man flying the raid.

For the record, he told baseball stories of the old days just as well. He was my warm friend and I'll miss him.

my lost weekend automatically qualifies me as a "failure in the home." But, if I string a bunch of these together and stack them alongside all those other times when I can't be home at all, I'd definitely be a contender.

And not just because I'm not available to my kids 24 hours a day. There are plenty of successful parents who spend even less time with their children than I do. But what I did last weekend was send a message to my children that fixing the dryer is more important to me than Amy is. And watching the football game is more important than Joseph. And cleaning the kitchen is more important than Andrea. And visiting with my sister is more important than Elizabeth.

Of course, I don't really believe that. But that's what my actions told them. And at this point in their lives, what I do means a whole lot more to them than what I say.

Our children are growing up in incredible times. Basic values--from honesty to integrity to morality--are being threatened on every front. Young people who live without the security of parental love and support are in for a rough ride, especially if they attempt to fill that void with the things the world considers important: money, status, sex, popularity--and more money.

That's why our children need the best we can give them of ourselves, both in terms of quality and quantity. Just as it isn't enough to simply "share space" with them without any meaningful interaction, so too are a few "quality" minutes here and there insufficient. They need our time and our attention, and they need it now--before it's too late to make a difference.

I know, I know-- we all have lives of our own to lead. We have careers, and in more cases than not, divorce or death has fragmented the family. None of that changes our primary responsibility to our children. Whether we're part of a married couple with a single sizable income or a single parent struggling to get by on minimum wages, the responsibility is the same: do the best you can do. Let your children know how valuable and important they are by showing them how valuable and important they are to you.

Now, if you'll excuse me--I've got bicycle tires to fix.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movies: Jacob's Ladder and White Palace

"Jacob's Ladder"

I usually don't get scared at the movies. Horror films of late are usually phony or stupid, and they don't exactly put fear in my heart. Fortunately, fans of the macabre now have a new champion. "Jacob's Ladder" scared the living hell out of me. "Fatal Attraction" director Adrian Lyne has created a vision so terrifying that it isn't just scary, it's emotionally disturbing.

Tim Robbins stars as Jacob, a divorced Vietnam veteran, now postal worker, living with his sultry girlfriend (Elizabeth Pena). He's always had to deal with personal horrors--his experiences in the war, the death of his youngest son, his divorce--but nothing could have prepared him for the terror with which he now lives. Haunted by nightmares and demonic apparitions, Jacob slowly loses his perception of fantasy and reality. Everywhere he turns he finds another reminder of his hellish existence. Demons appear to him in subway stations, reptilian monsters caress his lover, and phantom autos hunt him down. Perhaps the similarities between his images of hell and real life are no accident. Perhaps his existence is an eternal purgatory.

The story of "Jacob's Ladder" is completely engrossing, the suspenseful aspects overshadowing the occasional confusion. But the film's real power comes from audio and visual style, both of which are original and stunning. It's true the film manipulates human emotion and intentionally tries to shock the audience, but it made for an incredible experience. "Jacob's Ladder" is one of the few recent films which can inspire a strong feeling of catharsis.

"White Palace"

Now, I like to watch wild, steamy sex as much as the next guy, but this movie is really horrible. It isn't sexy, it isn't erotic, and it isn't remotely romantic. "White Palace" is cheap, tactless and disgusting.

Here's the story. Industrious young stud, Max Baron (James Spader), mourns the loss of his darling wife by submitting to the pains of sexual abstinence. So repressed is our hero, that he cannot even face a staggering number of eligible beauties whose only wish is to feed him grapes.

Then! Max finally meets a woman who can turn him on. Meet Nora Baker (Susan Sarandon), slinger of rat burgers, working class sex-pot.

She knows how to save a man from sexual suicide--wake him up one morning with an oral-sex surprise. Follow that up with a bout of cheap sex, gleefully squealing like a pig all the while. Boy, that's sexy!

Sarandon is embarrassing and Spader is dull. Eileen Brennan appears as Nora's sister, Rosemary, and she does add a little comic relief. But that only takes up about ten minutes of the whole movie, so I think the only solution is to burn the negative and try to move on.

Smokeout set for Saturday, November 15th

Smokers who want to "leave the pack behind," can get help from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. November 15, when Grossmont Hospital participates in the "Great American Smokeout."

Stop-smoking packets will be available, along with healthy snacks and information about smoking and related diseases.

Pulmonary Services personnel will conduct free "peak flow" tests for those who wish to check their breathing capacity.

Healthy holiday cooking offered

Grossmont Hospital's Healthy Gourmet School has planned a series of holiday cooking classes that will provide attendees with healthy holiday fare.

The Healthy Gourmet's dessert buffet for the holidays is Tuesday, November 13, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Fill your holiday kitchen with the tempting aroma of holiday sweets. You'll know that this season, the treats you make are all good for the heart.

A heart-warming holiday brunch class will be held Tuesday, November 27, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Instructor Claudia Hufnagle is sure to delight participants.

Holiday party fare will be offered on Tuesday, December 11 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Betsy Horton-LaForge will demonstrate how to whip-up a festive buffet of savory and sweet holiday appetizers which are as healthy as they are delicious. The class will include a drawing for a healthy holiday gift basket.

Pre-registration is required. For fees and more information call the Wellness Center at Grossmont Hospital, 668-4250.

Grossmont to stage "The Merry Widow"

The Grossmont College Opera Theater and the East County Performing Arts Center will present "The Merry Widow" on November 9, 10 and 11.

This delightful comedic operetta will be performed in English. "The Merry Widow" is being directed by Elizabeth Kimery and will feature guest conductor Federico Moreno-Torres II, leading a full orchestra.

Their performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. on November 9 and 10, with a matinee performance on November 11, beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets are available by calling the Grossmont Fine Arts box office at 465-1700, extension 241, or by calling ECPAC at 440-2277 between noon and 6 p.m. Adult admission is $10, with a $2 discount for students. Groups of 20 or more will be charged $5 per person.

Contemporary ensemble at ECPAC

The Grossmont College music department and the East County Performing Arts Center will present a unique group whose original compositions blend elements of classical and jazz music with a contemporary style. ARS NOVA will perform a variety of music on Saturday, November 17 at 8 p.m. The ensemble, comprised of Grossmont College music department instructors, includes: Steve Baker, piano; Fred Benedetti, guitar; Doug Booth, bass; James Morton, percussion; and Robert Williams, flute.

Tickets for the show are $6 and available from the Performing Arts Center box office by calling 440-2277, noon to 6 p.m.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: IF YOUR PROPERTY IS IN FORECLOSURE BECAUSE YOU ARE BEHIND IN YOUR PAYMENTS, IT MAY BE SOLD WITHOUT ANY COURT ACTION, and you may have the legal right to bring your account in good standing by paying all of your past due payments plus permitted costs and expenses within the time permitted by law for reinstatement of your account, which is normally five business days prior to the date set for the sale of your property. No sale date may be set until three months from the date this notice of default may be recorded (which date of recordation appears on this notice). This amount is $41,429.61, as of October 18, 1990, and will increase until your account becomes current. You may not have to pay the entire unpaid portion of your account, even though full payment was demanded, but you must pay the amount stated above. However, you and your beneficiary or mortgagee may mutually agree in writing prior to the time of notice of sale is posted (which may not be earlier than the end of the three-month period stated above) to, among other things, (1) provide additional time in which to cure the default by transfer of the property or otherwise; (2) establish a schedule of payments in order to cure your default; or both (1) and (2). Following the expiration of the time period referred to in the first paragraph of this notice, unless the obligation being foreclosed upon or a separate written agreement between you and your creditor permits a longer period, you have only the legal right to stop the sale of your property by paying the entire amount demanded by your creditor. To find out the amount you must pay, or to arrange for payment to stop the foreclosure, or if your property is in foreclosure for any other reason, contact: DICKSON ENTERPRISES PENSION AND PROFIT SHARING PLAN, c/o COMMUNITY LOAN BROKER-AGE, 2413 Pacific Coast Highway, Suite 202, Lomita, CA 90717

Attention: Diana
Telephone: (213) 539-7290 if you have any questions, you should contact a lawyer or the government agency which may have insured your loan.

Notwithstanding the fact that your property is in foreclosure, you may offer your property for sale, provided the sale is concluded prior to the conclusion of the foreclosure. Remember, YOU MAY LOSE LEGAL RIGHTS IF YOU DO NOT TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under Deed of Trust

The undersigned, as Trustee under that certain Deed of Trust executed by PATRICK M. SPINOSA AND LOIS J. Joyce's Jottings

The second annual Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce DrawDown has come and gone. It was a fun filled evening for many. We were entertained by the voice of Wendy Bailey, our own Miss Lemon Grove. She sang three lovely songs, Ice Castles, Wings, and Somewhere. Wendy is a very talented young lady and her poise is remarkable. She has a very musical tone and she was singing under conditions that are not the best. The acoustics in the senior center are not the best for a singing situation. The music was bouncing off the walls, but Wendy preformed like a professional, in fact, she had better control, the pro's are the ones who won't deliver unless they have things set-up just so. Thanks so much for doing a fabulous job and it was enjoyable. My daughter and I both had goose bumps all over us while Wendy was singing.

The winner of the Drawdown, was none other than our Chamber president, Kevin Smith. The lucky guy! Kevin had a real dilemma as he mentioned one day before he bought his tickets. Kevin was trying to decide if he should attend his school reunion in Tennessee or attend the DrawDown. After a couple of weeks he felt it was more important to him to support the Chamber. He could always make the next reunion. Well, I bet Kevin is really happy to have made the choice to attend the DrawDown. The thousand dollars will make it more enjoyable for his next reunion.

The food was so good! Being on a different eating plan for the past 10 months I felt so sinful, but loved every bite of the Chicken Cordon Blue, and especially the dessert, Orange cheesecake with a thin chocolate topping. Even the coffee was the best. Our table was filled with "oohs and aahs", and my friends thank me for telling them about our fundraiser. They were winners also. My husband didn't win anything. I won two really nice "In N Out Burger" T-shirts. I also took home two bottles of wine and tickets to the Charger vs. Tampa Bay game. The last two tickets were entrusted ed to me by Don Parent and his wife. Don had something come up at the last minute and he asked if I would accept anything if he would win. I had expected Don and Dale to walk into the hall at any minute. When my family and I got home, I called Don to announce his winnings. He was surprised and said he was sorry they just couldn't get away.

I underwent shoulder surgery this past week and will be out of the office for a couple of weeks. Lorraine Mundt and others are helping me keep up on business, and although the office will be closed much of the time that I am off, we will respond to any messages left on the answering machine, so if you have a question or problem, call the office and leave a message on the tape and someone will get back to you as soon as possible.

This Newsletter is abbreviated somewhat because of my hospitalization. We will get back on track next month.

Happy Thanksgiving!
